The culminating activity or product for performance-based learning is one that lets a student demonstrate evidence of understanding through a transfer of skills. A performance-based assessment is open-ended and without a single, correct answer, and it should demonstrate authentic learning, such as the creation of a newspaper or class debate. The benefit of performance-based assessments is that students who are more actively involved in the learning process absorb and understand the material ...

In creating performance task assessment lists, teachers focus on what students need to know and be able to do. One result is that teachers can more consistently and fairly evaluate and grade student work. Information from performance task assessment lists also helps students set learning goals and thus helps teachers focus subsequent instruction.

What is Performance-Based Learning and Assessment, and Why

To develop meaningful performance assessment tasks that will reveal the learning that teachers hope to see, educators need to take an assessment perspective from the beginning, Wiggins believes. "If you think like an assessor, you're thinking, 'Given what I want them to learn, what counts as evidence that they understand that?'" he says.
