Fuseki did not see

significant

improvement until the influence-oriented style

of play evolved in the 20th century. Perhaps the most highly

regarded pioneer

player of the 20th century, Go Seigen,

created an uproar

when he played his

third move (black 5) on the tengen, or center

point in a game against the reigning Honinbo

Shusai. An unwise move in classical thinking, it was considered an insult to someone of the Honinbo's stature.
