The intersection of great power and regional states on one hand, with that of states and social movements on the other, was, therefore, to be dramatically reaffirmed in the Cold War. The Cold War, which lasted from the late 1940s to the end of the 1980s, was a multi-layered competition: while it most evidently did involve wars and military competition between east and west, directly and in support of allies in the Middle East, it also involved more than a mainly military contest, a rivalry ...

Regional seats of government or FSCs were the best known aspect of Britain's civil defence preparations against nuclear war. In fact, however, naming conventions changed over the years as strategies in Whitehall changed. In the aftermath of the nuclear attack on Hiroshima and the Soviet Union's development of the atom bomb, it was clear that London could not survive a nuclear bombardment. Although considerable effort still went into secret construction of military citadels under London, the solu

The conflict between Armenia and Azerbaijan has been officially ongoing since the ending years of the Soviet empire, with only a ceasefire having kept things calm since 1994. But in some senses, the deepest roots of the conflict go back centuries. Often those who speak in favour of one side or the other do so not in wanting to back either the Armenians or the Azeris in particular, but simply to spite someone expressing support for the other side.
